DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1,2,4,8-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by the Japanese patent. The patent shows the shredding of gypsum board with the use of a feed means and intermeshing cutters.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 3,5,6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the Japanese patent. The particular blade density used would have been an obvious design choice once the basic apparatus was known based on several factors such as material being treated and desired end particle size.

Claim 7 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the Japanese patent as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Schwarz. The Japanese patent does not provide gullets which may result in material jam. Schwarz solves this problem by disclosing similar apparatus including the use of gullets; see figure 5. In order to prevent material from jamming, it would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the Japanese apparatus by providing gullets, taught to be desirable by Schwarz.

Claims 12-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the Japanese patent as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Edson et al. The Japanese patent does not use teeth of negative rake angles which may result in inefficient shredding. Edson et al solves this problem by disclosing similar apparatus including the use of negative rake angled teeth. In order to provide for efficient shredding, it would have been obvious for one of ordinary skill in the art to modify the Japanese process and apparatus by using teeth of negative angled rake, taught to be desirable by Edson et al. The exact angles used would then have been obvious design choices only based on several factors such as material being treated.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
